Self-care company aims to simplify employee T&E experience and targets cost savings with AI-powered platform

"Navan provides our teams with an easy-to-use tool that removes the complexity from business travel and expense, improving our employee experience and giving us the real-time visibility required to effectively manage costs," said Vincent Cotard, VP Global Head Real Estate and Workplace Experience at Opella. "Our employees will now have the easiest way to book travel and manage their expenses as we look to automate processes across the business."

Following Opella's carve-out from Sanofi, the self-care company sought an AI-powered partner to provide employees with an easy-to-use travel platform and to optimize spending. Initial conversations began about Navan's travel product and Opella extended the partnership to also include Navan's expense product, giving them end-to-end control and visibility of their entire travel and expense outlay.

Anticipated benefits from the partnership with Navan include:

- Cost savings: Targeting savings of up to 20% on annual travel spend through access to competitive pricing and reduced fees.
- High adoption: Aiming for 95% platform adoption and a 96% traveller satisfaction score.
- Operational efficiency: Saving an estimated 15 minutes per booking through AI-assisted capabilities and improved self-serve access across both web and mobile applications.

"We're thrilled to partner with Opella to modernise their global travel and expense programme," said Zahir Abdelouhab, SVP, EMEA, Navan. "By addressing issues with their existing inventory, we are confident that Opella will achieve the adoption rates and savings necessary to meet their goals."

Opella joins a growing list of enterprise organizations that have recently switched to Navan, including industry leaders from across France, including Alcatel-Lucent, Lafarge, and Expleo.
